Chris was an instrumental part of the design-build team for the site and utility improvements at Montgomery Place. When he came on board the project was behind schedule and its budget bloated. Taking over as the lead designer, he got the project back on track managing with skill the complex job of coordinating the work of several other consultants as well as the Contractor during the design and investigation phase. During construction, his quick responses to site issues as they arose in the field were critical to allowing the Contractor to meet his schedule. Thanks largely to his efforts, the project was completed on schedule and within our budget.
